harmonious perception or realization of power. Bullying is often repetitive and may cause “serious, lasting problems” (A comprehensive approach to bullying prevention, Retrieved from: <https://dpi.wi.gov/sspw/safe-schools/bullying-prevention>).

“These behaviors are normative occurrences in schools, they are not considered socially acceptable in the context of democratic societies” (United Nations, 1989). I posit, bullying/harassment, may occur as a result of the intent to control another person’s behavior, attitudes, beliefs, and culture in general, for the acquisition of resources and the resultant power to achieve a goal that is not entirely ethical.

Bullying has long been tolerated as a rite of passage among children and adolescents. There is an implication that individuals who are bullied must have "asked for" this type of treatment, or deserved it. Sometimes, even the child who is bullied begins to internalize this idea. For many years, there has been a general acceptance and collective shrug when it comes to a child or adolescent with greater social capital or power pushing around a child perceived as subordinate. But bullying is not developmentally appropriate; it should not be considered a normal part of the typical social grouping that occurs throughout a child's life. Although bullying behavior endures through generations, the milieu is changing. Historically, bullying has occurred at school, the physical setting in which most of childhood is centered and the primary source for peer group formation. In recent years, however, the physical setting is not the only place bullying is occurring. Technology allows for an entirely new type of digital electronic aggression, cyberbullying, which takes place through chat rooms, instant messaging, social media, and other forms of digital electronic communication. Composition of peer groups, shifting demographics, changing societal norms, and modern technology are contextual factors that must be considered to understand and effectively react to bullying in the United States. Youth are embedded in multiple contexts and each of these contexts interacts with individual characteristics of youth in ways that either exacerbate or attenuate the association between these individual characteristics and bullying perpetration or victimization.
