Dear Shameless Death is Latife Tekin's first novel, and she wrote this in 1983. The author has been discussed a lot with this first novel; allegedly imitating Gabriel Garcia Marquez with the magical realism in the book. But, it is an autobiographical novel; it also describes society.

Dear Shameless Death - Latife Tekin - Elif the Reader

Berna Moran has also observed that Dear Shameless Death is as much an outsider's account of 'village culture' as an insider's. This is in response to the critic Murat Belge, who had convincingly argued that the importance of Dear Shameless Death rests in an authorial perspective that is rooted inside the village. Belge had pointed out that the genre known as the 'Village Novel' 'was a product of novelists of peasant origin who were educated at state teacher training (village ...
